Folks

The Floyd College community mourns the death of Bob Fletcher, instructor in English assigned to the North Metro Tech campus, who died Wednesday, September 8.

Philip Dillard, chairman of the Division of Humanities, said, "Bob was a well-liked professor. Students responded well to his personality, his teaching methods and his concern for their welfare. He was a wonderful team member in the Humanities Division, always volunteering for extra duty. Bob was also a very creative person, active in writing and poetry. He served as a volunteer in Cartersville helping troubled teens work out their problems through writing."

Please keep Bob's wife and two children in your prayers.

Sarah Burkhalter, assistant director of Public Service and Continuing Education, was recently awarded the "Outstanding Innovative Programming" Award by the Georgia Adult Education Association. The award was in honor of a program titled "Family Violence in Georgia," a two-day program designed to train both law enforcement agents and employees of the Department of Family and Children Services to operate as a team. The award is given annually to recognize adult/continuing education programs that are unusual, creative or innovative.
